

Our Community

Volunteer tutor helping a student work towards gaining her driving licence. Without having the ability to read and comprehend the road code, this would be an impossible task.

Forty percent of New Zealand's working age population do not have the minimum level of literacy and numeracy skills required to participate in the modern world.

Adult Learning Support Kāpiti is a non-profit organisation offering help, free of charge, to adults of any age who want to learn to become confident at reading, writing, math, communication and computer skills. Shortfalls in these areas can impede your ability to get work, a driving license, read your mail or read to a grandchild.

Adult Learning Support Kāpiti classes are small, everything is confidential and teaching is tailored to suit the needs and interests of the pupils. Emphasis is placed on developing real life skills - and having fun. Adult Learning Support Kāpiti also provides custom literacy and numeracy programmes in the workplace.

Students, just like their volunteer tutors, come from all walks of life. Tutors undergo thorough training and receive continued support. If you would like to help others with literacy difficulties or know of someone who needs help, it may even be you, contact Adult Learning Support Kāpiti, phone Sally on 0800 732 3464.
